

Rev John Flynn (1880-1951)

'Flynn of the Inland' is famous for establishing what later became the Royal Flying Doctor Service, bringing emergency medical assistance to outback Australians.

Flynn was a Presbyterian Minister who realised the desperate need for medical care of people in isolated communities. He established a series of hostels and bush hospitals throughout Central Australia. Flynn was innovative in using the newly invented pedal radio for contact with isolated families. In 1917 he set the foundations for the world's first air ambulance service, bringing medical care to people who would otherwise have suffered untreated. Originally just John Flynn's dream, the first flying doctor left Cloncurry airport in 1928. Pilots often navigated with just a compass (visible in the transparent window on the $20 note).

The Bank of NSW was founded in her home in 1817.
